Online PR News – 14-June-2016 – Austin / TX – College kids getting arrested for being college age kids is nothing new or out of the ordinary, but what has changed over the past 7 years are Sheriff's Departments practices of uploading their booking photos to major search engines like Google, Yahoo, and Bing. For a graduating senior entering the job market, having a mugshot sitting at the top of Google adds to the difficulty of getting a job in an already competitive job market. After waiting months for the phone to ring, many College Students are unaware that they have been disqualified due negative search results in Google.

The CEO of RemoveSlander.com in a recent interview with CNN shared that a growing segment of their client base are parents of college students, and for this reason his company is now offering a discount to help reduce cost. "Starting today, parents of college student can take advantage of a 30% OFF Discount on all Reputation Management services offered by RemoveSlander.com." We consider our company the Best Mugshot Removal Service because we were the first Mugshot Removal Service and we care about how the internet affects lives. Having a mugshot picture and link in Google when a college student is trying to find a job, is pretty much a guarantee that potential employers would decline that student upon a simple Google search.
